Leadbitter has undergone significant growth over the last 10 years to the point where it is now one of the largest construction companies operating within the South of England and South Wales with an annual turnover approaching £150m and over 350 employees.

Working in market sectors such as health, education, leisure, affordable housing and student accommodation, Leadbitter has built a strong client portfolio within Oxford and the surrounding area.

The company is delivering high quality student accommodation projects for St Anne's College and Worcester College Oxford, The University of Surrey, Exeter University and Kingston University, whilst last year it successfully completed major schemes for both the University of Oxford and Oxford Brookes University.

This year we have also been awarded contracts to build new teaching facilities for the Tresham Institute in Kettering as well as a Treatment Centre at Horton Hospital in Banbury.

In the leisure sector, Leadbitter is currently on site at Horfield in Bristol, Shipston on Stour and Cirencester, building new leisure facilities. We have recently completed a new Performance Centre where our elite athletes can train at Bisham Abbey in Marlow for Sport England.

Leadbitter has been accredited with many industry awards including Regional Contractor of the Year and several RoSPA Gold Awards for excellence in Health and Safety. We have also had four of our Project Managers win awards in the recent Chartered Institute of Building Construction Manager of the Year Awards 2005.

Managing Director Bob Rendell stated that he considers their success and growing reputation within the construction industry to be firmly rooted in their strong sense of customer focus and belief that the foundation to all successful construction projects is the establishment, at the outset, of mutual trust and respect between all members of the team.
